

Communication intern with interest in sustainability and food

Interested in communication and sustainability? Want to become a part of a young startup company and help to develop our visual identity and how to communicate?

Who we are

Sidestream is a small startup company working to promote circularity in the food industry. We facilitate the exchange of food industry by-products and sidestreams, connecting businesses that generate them with those that can use them. We are currently focusing on a project to repurpose spent grain from beer brewing into baked goods.

What we're looking for

We are seeking a communications intern to join our team to help us:

- Develop a communication strategy that aligns with our upcoming projects
- Develop our website (no developer skills required) to ensure it reflects our current activities and future vision
- Manage and create social media content for LinkedIn and Instagram, integrated into the broader communications strategy
- Bring your own ideas and creative input to further improve our communication efforts

Your specific tasks depend on the competences you bring along. Therefore, you will get a lot of freedom to shape your tasks and responsibilities during the internship so do not hesitate to reach out!

What we offer

- Flexible working hours and the freedom to approach tasks in your own way
- Hands-on experience in a startup environment (we are a part of Demokrati Lab - a shared office space for startups in Nordvest)
- Office access up to two days a week, with collaboration and scheduling flexibility

What we're looking for

- A background or strong interest in communication, design/visual communication, social media, or website development
- An interest in food, sustainability, or circularity is a bonus, but not required
- Self-motivation and the ability to work independently while contributing to a small team

Practical details

- Start date: End of January/Start of February 2025
- Location: Copenhagen (flexible office access)
